Choice Italian Knits

• by Eleonora Natili

Whether you're dressing for the office or an evening out, Italian knitwear designers have you covered with a tempting range of stylish looks.

The Spring/Summer 2006 season is getting off to a fashionable start as top knitwear houses all across Italy preview their newest collections. And more than ever before, there's a veritable "embarrassment of riches" to choose from.

For starters, knit dresses have come into their own in everything from sleek jersey fabrications to pretty crochets.

"Dresses are mainstays of the knitwear scene, and each season we show more and more of them," says Angela Missoni, creative force behind the iconic Missoni label, and certainly an expert in her field.

At this address and elsewhere, the "numera uno" silhouette of the moment is the Empire line scared by an inset waistband or pretty ribbon sash. And raised waistlines are flattering to most figures, far they tend to elongate the silhouette by drawing the eye downward.

Dresses that easily skim the figure are also top drawers for spring. These come in a plethora of engaging shapes, from the smart A-line to the lean and lanky midi-length dress.

Next on the must-have list are ultra polished sweaters in everything from perky shrugs and baleros to elongated cardigans and tunics.

Brief shrugs that either tie under the bust or are unfastened and barely cover the shoulders are the hottest sweaters of the moment. Many of sweaters in crinkly knits, and teams them with flouncy print skirts for a very appealing, casually chic look.

The season's prettiest T-shirts came from Bugliri, a Milanese firm famous for its sweet floral print T's in ice cream colors. You can never have too many of these.

Styled in a sportier vein are amply cut cardigans and pullovers that look as though they were borrowed from a man's wardrobe. Whether done in tweedy textures or classic smooth surfaces, the oversize sweater is the epitome of understated glamour.

these brief tops are paired with a larger pullover for what could be called a modern take on the twin set.

Sweaters that tie, drape or are softly gathered are, in fact, a recurrent knitwear theme. Missoni, for example, does a whole group of gathered and tied Acting legend Katharine Hepburn, for example, was certainly a perfect example of how a slouchy sweater worn with a smart pair of trousers can be casual and at the same time sexy.

Knit trousers and leggings are definitely in for Spring. Straight-leg trousers with just a hint of flare at the bottom lack the best. Also, don't forget Capri pants that stop at mid-calf. When Summer rolls around, well dressed women will be wearing them in Capri, as well as in city streets.

Hand-knit accessories are also enjoying a real heyday. One of the most sought after items right now is Ferragamo's smart satchel done in a creamy white knit trimmed in snakeskin. Roomy and at the same time lightweight, this is a handbag that will definitely draw attention wherever it turns up.

"We can barely keep up with requests for this bag, and we have to re-order it continuously," report the salespersons at Ferragamo's Fifth Avenue store.

Edgy details are also what Italian knits are all about.

Currently all the rage are pretty rosette appliques and embroideries which surface on everything from dresses and sweaters to belts, hats and even shoes.

Beading is also a fresh embellishment, although it should always be used with restraint. Take your cues from Moschino's brief shrugs trimmed in delicate beads and bows, or follow the example of Bugiri's scoop-neck sweaters finished with a band of shimmering crystals.

Flirty ruffles are another feminine touch. Try a ruffled border around the neckline and cuffs of an otherwise basic pullover. But remember to let your ruffled sweater be the showpiece, and keep the rest of the silhouette sleek and simple.

You can also add pizzazz to an outfit with a touch of fringe, although here, too, the keyword is moderation. Finish a pair of Capri-length pants with an inch or so of fringe, or run fringe around the hem of a flared skirt.

Other pretty details that Italian designers work into their knits are scalloped edges, contrast stitching, leather borders, fabric intarsias and decorative buttons.

When it comes to choosing what yarns and textures to work with, keep in mind three overriding trends: openwork crochets, multi-color tweeds and fine-gauge jerseys.

In the first camp, crocheted knits are riding high in everything from filmy fishnet to lace-like textures. And crochet isn't reserved for small items, but is used for upbeat jackets, sweaters and even dresses.

"We've never had as many crochet knits in our store as we have now," said the sales personnel of Clan International, a trendy boutique in Bologna. "As soon as new styles come in, they walk right out of the store."

Among the current top sellers is Laura Biagiotti's multi-color crocheted top done in an intricate floral motif, Albertino of Rome's long and lanky crocheted coat, and Malo's sexy hot pants and matching vest.

Cotton is the classic yarn choice for crochet, but you might want to try silk, rayon or a synthetic blend — all of which will give a softer hand and greater drapability to your crochet fabrications.

Multi-color tweeds also add clout to this season's knits and look smartest for casually styled cardigans and jockets. And tweeds needn't be heavyweights. Italian designers use delicately nubbed, slubbed and space-dyed yarns in fine gauges for their smart tweed designs.

Heading the jersey camp are shiny mercerized cotton yarns, followed by silk, rayon, linen, cashmere and synthetic specialties. Many of these smooth twist yarns come in 30 to 40 denier counts, and they work up beautifully into trim sweaters and poncs.

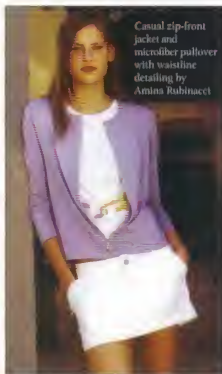

Spandex stretch yarns are still popular with many designers who use them sparingly in combination with other fiber yarns.

"Some of our most popular sweaters are fashioned of cashmere blended with 5 percent spandex," said Fabrizio Giorgetti, merchandise manager of the eponymous knitwear firm. "A small percentage of spandex adds just the right amount of body and bounce to cashmere, and it makes for easier care and comfort."

A little bit of glittery Lurex also adds excitement to today's knits. Designers either work metallic yarns into the body of knits for subtle all-over shine or they reserve glitter for garment borders and trim.

Color choices for Spring/Summer are characterized by a certain schizophrenia, as they swing from sophisticated "nan colors" to sunny brights.

We'll be seeing a lot of white, cream, ivory and sand for sporty as well as for elegant knits. Although these are delicate colors that require a good deal of upkeep, there's really nothing quite like them when it comes to drop-dead glamour.

That perennial favorite, black, loses some of its clout for warm weather knits, although there will always be die-hard fashionistas who will never give it up.

To avoid looking too serious and somber, black needs the added sparkle of beading and embroidery, or the lightening effect of see-through textures like mesh, lace and crachet.

And remember: both black and white are great background colors as well, for they add sharpness to patterns and definition to silhouettes.

Even though seasonal brights run the color gamut, there is a certain insistence right now on greens and oranges.

Newest greens have acid overtones and carry such self-descriptive names as avocado, lime and poison green. Green looks best for sporty sweaters and jackets, and it also teams nicely with white—a very trendy combination this Spring and Summer.

Striped cashmere pullover and ribbed cardigan by Giorgetti

Orange is next on the chromatic agenda, and designers employ it in shades ranging from soft apricot to deep pumpkin. Since orange is definitely not for the faint-of-heart, you can tone it down by combining it with neutrals of white, cream or beige.

For pastel lovers, delicate lilac is another color option suitable for pretty pullovers and cardigans. Also, we'll always be seeing pale pink, aqua, pale yellow and silvery gray—all failproof color choices for sporty as well as for dressy warm weather knits.

Long on chic and charm, Italian knits offer an exciting roster of style, yarn and color options. Now all that you have to do is make your choice. KS

The Rare Magic of Kollage Yarns

For Susan Maraca, life has been unusually full of magic. In fact, for thirteen years she worked as a magician's assistant, keeping audiences across the country spell-bound with her sleights-of-hand and illusionists' tricks.

But the real magic started much earlier than that. At the age of six, she learned to take a ball of yarn and, with the touch of her wand-like knitting needles, transform it into a beautiful pair of slippers. By the time she started her second pair, she was already performing her own special brand of alchemy, transfiguring single strands of yarn into more complex — and much more enchanting — blends.

It was a process that would become a lifelong passion. A solitary strand of fiber was never enough. Each plain filament seemed to her to cry out for the complexity and contrasts she could provide by winding in other colors and textures: a jewel-toned glimmer here, a glint of metal there, a soft touch of fluff, a sensuous slide of ribbon.

For years, she indulged herself, her friends and her knitting students with her bewitching fiber concoctions. But then her husband, Mark, recognizing the potential for turning pleasure into pleasurable profit, began urging her to apply her wizardry on a larger scale. In 2004, the couple officially launched their new wholesale business — Kollage Yarns.

Nowadays, Susan is performing her magic full-time, along with a staff of some dozen highly valued assistants, many of them family members. In fact, she jokes that her family has taken to fleeing at her approach, knowing that she will put them to work. But in reality, everyone pitches in good-naturedly. Mark does the marketing and ordering, handles overseas shipping, tracks inventory, takes the photographs for the web site and mans the phones. Susan's mother, Jenny, keeps the books and creates the company's distinctive hand-crocheted color cards. Her sister Tracy helps select yarn colors, particularly the pastels that are her special forte. Her other sister Terrie makes clay buttons for Susan's knitted garments. Her niece, Courtney, models patterns when she is home from college. Her nephews, Jonathan and Miller, inventory product deliveries. And her father-in-law, Mario, handcrafts collectible square rosewood knitting needles. Mean-while, anywhere from four to seven local women (depending on the current pace of the business) busily spin together the fibers that will reflect the unique vision of this remarkably talented yarn designer.

Susan feels very deeply her good fortune in having such a devoted staff. She states emphatically that without them, and most particularly without the support and encouragement of her mother and her husband, Kollage would not have been at all possible. She refuses to advertise far spinners, preferring to draw her workers from the local knitting and crocheting community. And she frequently spins with them, partly as a way of staying in close touch with the company's production process, but partly, too, to indulge her own love of the craft and her pleasure in the companionship of this tightly knit community of women. Her philosophy of doing business is to treat everyone as she would want to be treated, so she works hard to maintain a casual approach to work, keeping her employees' schedules flexible so that their jobs accommodate and enhance the other components of their lives. Consequently, they display an unusual degree of loyalty and responsibility. Just as important, they are highly productive.

And it's a good thing, because business is thriving. The demand has more than exceeded any expectations that Susan and Mark originally had. Still, they refer to Kollage as a home business—and they mean it literally. The entire 2,500-square foot downstairs of their home has been turned over to the making of their ten (soon to be twelve) lines of yarn, and the business frequently spills over into other parts of the house as well. Even the bedroom, which has been declared officially off-limits to the potential stumbling blocks represented by large cones of yarn, is the scene of much of Susan's pattern designing.

"In the next six months or so," she says regretfully, "we're going to have to move to a larger space. But I'll miss being able to go downstairs at 3:00 AM to play with the fibers. Worse yet, I'll have to get dressed every day!" She laughs as she says this, but she means it as well. Because, as it is now, there are days when Susan never makes it out of her pajamas. She starts doing something on the computer early in the morning, and before she knows it, her spinners are arriving, and then somehow it simply doesn't seem to matter anymore. And then there are those days when there simply isn't time to change. Her staff calls those "pajama days," and they know to stay out of her way and let Susan power her way through the busy hours.

Susan's appetite for conjuring up brand new yarns, and for variety in general, is insatiable. Not surprisingly, the biggest challenge for her has been resisting the temptation to vary each yarn each and every time she makes it. She is grateful to Mark for his more temperate business sense, which often works as a counterbalance to her runaway desires. Thanks to him, the various lines of yarn have been effectively standardized, so that they are consistent in their distinctive combinations of color and fiber content...well, all but one of them, anyway. Susan gets to satisfy her hunger for infinite diversity with a line of custom-designed-to-order yarns that constantly metamorphose to suit the needs, tastes and agendas of individual customers. Its name is "Symphony," and its offerings comprehend everything from velvety ladder yarns and satiny ribbons to whimsical sprays of eyelash — up to twelve different fibers and colors per blend!

And what colors! Susan's own humor and exuberance, and her unique creative genius, all come through full force here as she integrates astonishingly diverse hues and somehow makes them play together in perfect amity. In a version made for one client, flecks of sienna and subtle glimmers of amethyst swim in a sea of tawny golds and pale ocean green. In another, kicky lime and bright coral are laced with edgy little flickers of turquoise. A third has a shimmering rainbow of strange, saturated shades tossed with studied randomness and, somehow, with absolute harmony, into a bed of a lovely dark and dusky violet.

The other lines are every bit as amazing, both in the uniqueness of their colors and in their spectacular combinations of textures. "Passion," the newest of Kollage's blends, offers twelve sumptuous combinations of color while intermingling a super-short eyelash with a nubby variegated, a unique flog style yarn, and even a touch of glitzy metallic. "Inspiration," available in nine breathtaking colorways, tantalizes knitters with its mysterious gleams of satiny ladder yarn half-hidden amidst the soft elegance of mahair and accented by edgy touches of sparkle. Sophisticated yet somehow soft and cuddly as well, the eleven striking color blends of "Radiance" offer a delightful touch of whimsy as their multi-colored accent yarns peek out from the depths of a lush eyelash. Supremely elegant, yet sure to turn heads, "Serenity" features super merino and variegated crepe wools along with fabulous glimmers of silk in nine blends of radiant color — and it feels! "Illumination," which comes in eleven stunning colorways, is a fascinating mix of matte, silk and sparkle — sophistication with a splash of sheer fun. Offering an opulent, high-end designer look, the ten color combinations of "Splendor" have a deep texture that is emphasized by sudden flashes of gleaming lodder yarn and long, luxurious sprays of eyelash.

The list goes on and on, and it is constantly growing. Two new lines will be coming out in the spring of 2006. "Hot Cotton," its mixture of cotton, eyelash and nubby fibers available in fourteen spicy blends of color, features a rare resistance to the stretching so often typical of cottons. "Blissful," which will be offered in twenty-four color blends, combines the same nubby and eyelash yarns with a silky gleam of ribbon. And as if the yarns aren't enough, Kollage is also coming out with a line of "Accentables," metal embellishments in a variety of shapes and textures for sweaters and felted bags, all available in aged gold, silver and copper finishes.

So what new magic can we expect from this thriving young company in the future? Susan says only half-jokingly that she'd like to have 100 lines of yarn...at least! But her short-term goal is to keep pace somehow with the incredible rate of Kollage's growth. Even more important, she's determined to keep the fun in doing business; to continue performing her remarkable brand of sorcery in such a way that the opportunities for profit don't obscure what made the whole venture attractive in the first place — her passion for creating new and ever more glorious combinations of color and texture.

Because that's where the real magic lies for Susan Moraco...and for us, her customers, as well. KN

Important Crochet Finishes Knitters Should Know

by Leslye Solomon

Even though knitting is the general content of this magazine, the subject of crochet has a place in our knitting world. It sometimes rears its delicate little head to the delight and appreciation of some and to the dismay and general anger of others who don't want to see anything else but knitting in this Knit 'N Style magazine. However, there is a definite reason for knitters to never accept the state of ignorance about the brief and easy operation of a crochet hook when it comes to knitting. If you are new to knits and purrs and just embarking on making your first sweater, learning how to use a crochet hook to improve edges won't be any more difficult than learning the knit stitch...no, really.

There are many advantages to a crochet edge on knitwear. We shouldn't leave any edge unfinished, even scarf edges. The most basic of scarves could be improved by a smoothing, single crochet finish. One of my favorite uses of a crochet edge is the covering up of the remaining waven in tails or loops left by striping or hiding the tails of running out of one ball and adding another. Not only will a row of crochet neatly finish an exposed edge, but it helps hide imperfections. So...you gotta learn it - that's all there is to it.

Just like you probably wouldn't wear an evening gown with tennis shoes to that all important ten year, black tie, high school reunion, there is something about a beautiful sparkly, metallic, or shiny evening sweater that looks wrong with ribbing as a finish. A ribbed finish looks just a little too sporty. When ribbing is wrong, crochet might be a prettier, more elegant or delicate option when choosing how to finish a neck or armhole edge.

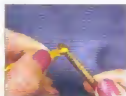

When finishing a blanket, a change of texture is an aesthetically welcomed relief as there are ways to quickly weigh or curled edge, correcting it to a right angle. Adjusting as you crochet, the edge can be added without a commitment to a particular amount of stitches picked up to knit.

Just when your buttonhole anxiety rises to the point of excessive scarf/shawl/pullover production behavior (a new knitting anxiety disorder), to single crochet the bands and place a space for a buttonhole is a great thing to add to your list of talents. So allow me to expose some easy basics of what every knitter should know about crochet. I'm not saying that you have to know how to crochet a sweater, although that would be a nice diversion in your future, but this minimal crochet stuff might come in handy one day.

Oh...just one more thing: Here's another reason to be able to operate a crochet hook. Do you ever drop a stitch by accident, after a vigorous sneeze, wrangling your knitting out of the hands of your curious three-year-old, or just accidentally pulling your knitting out of your tote bag...the wrong way...knocking stitches off the needle? A crochet hook is what you must have waiting on call to retrieve a dropped stitch so you can regain your composure, resume normal breathing, and enjoy your knitting again. In a previous issue, I illustrated how a crochet hook should always be by your side for that occasional mishap. Have a general size for whatever yarn thickness you might be using. In our stash of tools, along with your tape measure and a large eye needle, you should have an appropriate hook that will successfully hold the thickness of your yarn.

The crochet hook - the needle with a notch

Crochet hooks come in sizes just like knitting needles. For repairs, you don't really have to go nuts about the thickness of the long part of the crochet hook, just the groove of it. The groove of the crochet hook is called the throat. The throat of the hook should be big enough for the yarn that you are working to be caught by it. The top of the hook should not be so big that you have difficulty inserting it through your knit edge.

Make sure your crochet hook is large enough to hold the yarn without splitting it, but small enough to be inserted into to the knit fabric.

The single crochet is the most basic of stitches. Here's how to do it. Grab one of your first scarves. Place a slip knot on your hook to start this practice. Take yarn and hold it over your left index finger. Hold the knit fabric along the edge with your thumb and index finger and let your yarn go over your finger. Hold the crochet hook with your right hand. Insert the hook from the front to the back of a knit edge, catch the yarn that is laying over the finger (a crochet yarn over) and bring it through the edge making a loose loop (for now). Now you will have two loops or stitches on the stem of the hook. Yarn over again and hang on to this yarn in the hook just a bit tight as you bring the yarn over through the looser two loops. Hey...that was your first sc or single crochet....and you didn't die! Ok...now skip the next row or space (as shown) and insert the hook into the next space, pull yarn through the edge (loose), yarn over and pull through the two loops on the hook. Turn the hook slightly downward as it brings the yarn through the pointed part of the hole of the stitches. Keep doing that along your edge and guess what... you're crocheting! Oh...and if you make a mistake, remove the hook and pull. The great thing about crochet is that if you are not happy with what you just did, it pulls out and you can try again!

Start with a slip knot on hook.

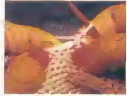

Insert hook through edge, place yarn over hook and bring it through the edge. Now there are two stitches or loops on hook.

Yarn over again and bring through these two loops.

After the yarn over was brought through the two loops, there is only one loop remaining. Now insert hook through next space, skipping every other row and repeat.

Look at where the last stitch was made, skip the next space, and go into the one right by your left thumb.

If your needle gets caught bringing the final yarn through the two loops, try to keep the first two loops just a bit larger, remembering that the final loop has to go through them.

The crochet edge

When edging anything knit, your goal is to insert the hook consistently along the edge being finished. Not only will it look neater, but you will not be making too much or too little edge. One should avoid a fluted, wavy edge, showing excessive insertions or stitches. One should also avoid an edge that bows, showing too tight or few insertions of the hook. This can be successfully done by inserting the hook every other row when crocheting up sides, and every stitch when crocheting the top of knitting.

After practicing this a few times, work on adjusting your tension. Become aware of the action of pulling the yarn through the final two loops. It is here that you develop a natural feel for the size of the loop you are pulling through those two stitches. Just for practice, try using more yarn to pull through...making a larger final loop. Try to hold it tighter, producing a smaller loop. Which one makes a prettier edge? Which tension causes the picking up of every other row to lay flatter? This is all within your control.

As you are creating the edge, frequently look at the edge so far and pull on it widthwise. It should not wave, and it should not bow. A slightly tighter edge can be pulled down to just the right angle and steam blocked into place. Too loose cannot be made to be smaller. If this is happening, try a smaller hook or tighten the size of the loop you are bringing through the two loops.

Now that you can single crochet, you can do this all around your scarves, your afghans, or any exposed knit edge.

Make the pieces of an entire sweater and, using a large eye needle, sew the sweater together: the shoulders, the sleeves and the side seams. Instead of picking up and ribbing the neck and/or front ports of your cardigan, crochet the edge. Start the edge somewhere at the bottom row, never at the beginning of a row or corner. Begin to go along the bottom edge, up the front, around the neck, down the front, and along the bottom edge. If your stitches are being held, you can insert the crochet hook into each held stitch and single crochet through each one of them.

If you are concerned that your neck is too large or will stretch, insert your crochet hook through two held stitches at one time, treating it as one. Try this three times on the left, center, and right areas of the back neck stitches.

Remember on your first row of single crochet to skip every other row and go into each stitch when you are on the top and bottom of your piece. However, on the second row, just insert your hook under the previous crochet. Continue around and around until you have an edge that looks deep enough.

I'm So Glad You Asked!

Buttonholes

If your edge along the front is about 5 rows of single crochet, the third and center row should be reserved for buttonholes. Place pins where you want your buttonholes to be along the band. Plan spacing that is about 2½ in. apart so the buttons hold the edge straight, not scalloped. Remember that men's buttonholes are on the left and women's are on the right. Make a buttonhole like this:

If you have a button that is 1 in. in diameter, ½ in. from center of where the button will be and your pin marking the placement, begin to make a few chain stitches. Lay the chain along the edge and find where it makes the right size hole. You might have to unravel the chain to shrink the hole, or add more to make it larger. Hold the chain along the edge and judge where you should resume the single crochet. Continue the single crochet by skipping a space, making a hole that is the size that is small enough to allow your button to pass through it, and then continue to the next space. Continue the single crochet around again, just crochet over the spaces through the buttonhole until the depth of the band is reached. If something is not right, simply rip it out.

This lumpy sweater was a perfect candidate for a non-fussy crocheted buttonhole band. In the center of this band, a buttonhole was made by making a few chains and, skipping a space, continuing the single crochet to the next hole placement.

The picot edge

Single crochet the amount of rows desired or this could be the first and only row. After 3 single crochets, chain 3, "insert hook at base of chain (the first chain done) and yarn over and just pull the yarn through. Single crochet 3 more stitches and repeat from *.

Oh...so now you want me to do this backwards?

If you can do a single crochet, then you can do a backwards (or reverse) single crochet. On the right side, single crochet from right to left, but do not turn. Chain 1 to rise up to the next row level and begin to single crochet from left to right like this:

Hold your yarn as you did before, but insert your hook under the next stitch to the right. Reach back and hook the yarn over your finger and bring it through the edge. Yarn over again and bring it through the 2 loops. Repeat this and notice a nice almost piped looking diagonal edge. It is this edge that I believe you'll really like along that dressy tank top or along a not-so-casual sweater.

Backwards single crochet:

Starting from the left edge with the right side facing you, insert hook under chain stitch from front to back, as indicated by arrow.

Yarn over and pull through the two loops on hook as indicated.

Insert hook under chain stitch from front to back as shown, and then repeat.

For a more decorative look, gather many strands of thin yarns. Let's say you are making a white sweater. Make the detail of using many strands of yarn. Find a thin strand of silver, black, gray, and shiny rayon white. Using all those strands, do your backwards single crochet. It really makes a nice, subtle, detailed finish.

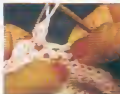

For a heavier finish, try the puff stitch. This is a good one for finishing afghans and, along with careful steaming, it may stop curling.

On right side of fabric: Row 1: With yarn matching main fabric, sc from right to left along the edge following the every other row rule, end with a chain 1. Row 2: Now with the same or contrasting color, working from left to right (like the backwards or reverse single crochet) and inserting hook from front to back into first space under previous sc. *yarn over first and insert hook through space, yarn over and bring through edge. Do this in the same space a total of 3 times (that means yarn over, insert hook through edge, yarn over, pull through 3 times). Chain 1 and make that loop look somewhat large so it can stretch to the next stitch as follows. Skip 1 space and repeat from *. R.

Yarn over first (unlike a single crochet) and insert hook through space to the right 3 times in one space as shown.

Yarn over and bring loop through all loops on hook.

Ch 1, skip one single crochet space and then repeat from second step above.

SIDES (make 4):

Pick up and k 17 sts along one side of bottom. Work 38 rows S1 st.

Row 2: P 3, CO 3, p 5, CO 3, p 3. Work 2 rows S1 st. Work 2 rows garter st, dec 2 sts across first row, — 15 sts. BO loosely.

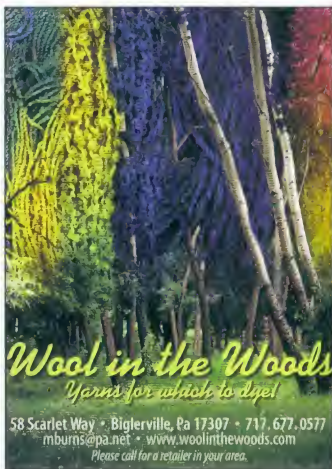

FINISHING: With seams to outside, sew 4 sides.

Optional Embellishment: We have added backstitch embroidery to our gift bag. Any simple design will work beautifully. Semi-felt bag before working backstitch embellishments.

Resume felting process. CAUTION: Working embellishments before felting will blur the image. This is the perfect project for needle felting embellishments. We have chosen to work a rabbit for Spring. Enlarge image to size of semi-felted bag, cut out image and work backstitch around image. Add embellishments to rabbit as necessary.

Felting: Place bag in a laundry bag or pillow protector. Wash in regular cycle with detergent in hot water, checking at regular intervals. If bag has not completely felted, reset wash cycle and continue agitation. Remove before spin cycle. Shape and stand to dry.

Drawing: Weave ribbon through buttonholes and tie. XS

HOOD: With A and straight ndls, CO 15 (18, 20) sts. Work in reverse S1 st until piece meas 16 (18, 20) in. from beg. BO all sts loosely.

FINISHING: (Note: When closing seams, use a crochet hook and a loose st. However, when you close your seams, do not close them too tightly. They should have a little stretch to work with the nature of the yarn.) With RS facing, close shoulder seams. Center Sleeves and sew in place. Close underarm seams. Attach hood: With RS facing pullover, using st st, attach one side edge from center Front around Back neck and end in center Front. Finish hood by closing the two ends tog to form hood.

TEARDROP FLOWERS: (Note: Crochet 2 flowers with larger crochet hook and 2 strands of B.)

Flower: Using smaller crochet hook and a single strand of B, ch sl st into first ch to form a ring.

Rnd 1: 3 ch (counts as 1 tr), work into ring 1 tr, (6 ch, 3 tr) 5 times, 6 ch, 1 tr, sl st into 3rd of 3 ch at beg of rnd.

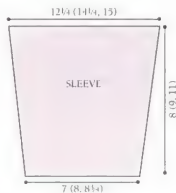

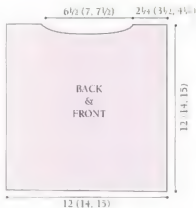

Rnd 2: *Ch 1, working into next 6-ch arch (1 dc, 1 hdc, 7 tr, 1 hdc, 1 dc), ch 1, skip 1 tr, sl st into next tr; rep from * 5 more times, sl st into 3rd of 3 ch at beg of previous rnd. Fasten off. With B, sew flowers into place.

To round off hood, from inside grab the tip and pull inward about 2 in. Tie bunched-up tip tog lightly with a strand of B. This will provide a rounder hood and eliminates a lot of shaping while knitting hood. With A, make tassels and attach them to the rounded hood with double strands of B. KS

Editorial ~ Lion Brand Contest Winners

"The Spring/Summer 2006 season is getting off to a fashionable start as top knitwear houses all across Italy preview their newest collections," reports Eleanora Natali. This issue is an introduction to Spring 2006 with Melissa Leapman's knit and crochet fitted jackets, Skocel's dynamite Big Mexiko Color Coat, Aurora Yarns' stunning Ulster Lace Coat, along with several still-so-popular shrugs and fun purses.

Complimenting this wonderful collection of designs to choose from, we are showcasing Kallage Yarns in this issue with a delightful sampling of their yarns and designs. Also featured is Stitch Elegance, a company that produces beautiful hand-made glass knitting needles and accessories.

In Leslye Solomon's article, "I'm So Glad You Asked!", she offers crochet finishes and tips for knitters, while Susan Lazear, in "Computer's Don't Byte", enlightens you on how to get started selling all that extra yarn you have on eBay.

In addition, we want to thank all the contestants who sent great projects to Knit 'N Style for the Lion Brand Yarn Design Contest. We are pleased to announce the winners listed below.

Happy knitting!
